Liu denied public matching funds

Mayoral race. The candidate said he will appeal the Board's decision.

A defiant John Liu said he was not deterred after the city's Campaign Finance Board denied his campaign more than $3.5 million in public matching funds Monday.

"The strength of this campaign has never been in the money; the strength of this campaign has always been in the people," Liu said.

The city comptroller and mayoral candidate was denied the funds after two former staffers were found guilty in May of attempting to funnel money to the campaign through an illegal fundraising scheme.

"The evidence suggests that the potential violations are serious and pervasive across the campaign's fundraising," Board Chair Joseph Parkes said after the vote.

Liu said he disputed the Board's characterization of his campaign.

Candidates participating in the city's campaign finance system can receive $6 in taxpayer funds for each $175 donated by individual residents, with a maximum $1,050 for each contributor.

Liu said that the campaign would appeal the Board's decision.

Outside of the Board meeting, protesters rallied both for and against the decision.

"This is a political hit," said Norman Seabrook, president of the correction officers' union.

Weiner gives out 'Even More Keys' in sexting wake

Election 2013. The new book gives 61 more ideas on how he'd run the city.

Anthony Weiner's mayoral campaign announced that he is following up his "64 Keys to the City" with a "second ideas book," titled "Even More Keys to the City."

The new book adds 61 ideas to the first book's 64, for a new total of 125 Weiner "keys to the city."

The ideas are geared at "keep[ing] New York the capital of the middle class."

Some of the ideas from Weiner's first book were tax incentives for people who commute to work by bicycle (idea No. 19), preserving Catholic schools (No. 5), helping community pharmacies compete with large chain drugstores (No. 33), a caregiver tax exemption for people

Seamless and GrubHub partner with city restaurants so that people can order food online. / GETTY IMAGES

Seamless, GrubHub will share NY market

No monopoly. The decision ensures there will be fair competition among online food sites.

Two online food giants, Seamless and GrubHub, have agreed to eliminate exclusive arrangements with Manhattan restaurants after they merge, Attorney General Eric Schneiderman announced Monday.

The company announced the merger in May but await approval from federal regulators.

In an investigation into a proposed merger between the companies, Schneiderman's office found Seamless had a large number of exclusive contracts with Manhattan restaurants. The prospect of a merger, his office said, increases the risk of anticompetitive behavior.

In the settlement, the companies agreed to waive existing exclusive rights with Manhattan restaurants.

The settlement "ensures that no single online platform will have a monopoly on access to Manhattan restaurants," Schneiderman said.

Horrid conditions.

The candidate was disgusted by the living conditions of the building.

Following a horrific report in Sunday's New York Post, mayoral candidate Bill Thompson showed up outside 140 Hester Street in Chinatown Monday afternoon to investigate the conditions of the Sun Bright Hotel.

According to the Post, men are living in hellish conditions on the third and fourth floors of the building in a "human kennel."

Thompson and some first responders were able to gain access to those floors. Two female reporters and Thompson's spokeswoman were denied entry.

A disgusted Thompson later described tiny chicken-wire-encased spaces about the size of a cot.

"Dirty isn't even — it is filthy," Thompson said. "It is filthy; it is disgusting."

A 74-year-old resident reportedly told the Post that a dead body was left there for "about 15 days."

Thompson said the Department of Buildings must respond immediately.

The Department of Buildings' response to a request for comment was: "The Department is investigating."

Accident. US military helicopter crashes in Japan's Okinawa

A U.S. military helicopter crashed on Japan's southern island of Okinawa yesterday, U.S. Forces in Japan said, an incident which may stoke anger over the concentration of U.S. military bases on the island.

The Japanese defense minister said three of the four people onboard were confirmed to have survived the crash, but the U.S. Air Force said in a news release that the condition of at least four people onboard was unknown.

There were no casualties among local residents, a Japanese official said.

Video footage showed smoke rising from a fire on a remote mountainside.

The air force said an HH-60 helicopter, based in Kadena airbase in Okinawa, crashed in a training area on the U.S. Marines' Camp Hansen and U.S. fire and rescue crews were responding, adding that the helicopter was conducting a training mission at the time. REUTERS

Unit covers up program used to investigate US criminals

DEA. The special unit was created in 1994 to combat Latin American drug cartels.

A secretive U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration unit is funneling information from intelligence intercepts, wiretaps, informants and a massive database of telephone records to authorities across the nation to help them launch criminal investigations of Americans.

Although these cases rarely involve national security issues, documents reviewed by Reuters show that law enforcement agents have been directed to conceal how such investigations truly begin — not only from defense lawyers but also sometimes from prosecutors and judges.

The undated documents show that federal agents are trained to "recreate" the investigative trail to effectively cover up where the information originated, a practice that some experts say violates a defendant's Constitutional right to a fair trial. If defendants don't know how an investigation began, they cannot know to ask to review potential sources of exculpatory evidence — information that could reveal entrapment, mistakes or biased witnesses.

"I have never heard of anything like this at all," said Nancy Gertner, a Harvard Law School professor who served as a federal judge from 1994 to 2011. Gertner and other legal experts said the program sounds more troubling than recent disclosures that the National Security Agency has been collecting domestic phone records. The NSA effort is geared toward stopping terrorists; the DEA program targets common criminals, primarily drug dealers. REUTERS

Leak case harms US diplomacy, official says at sentencing

Argued.
Manning's lawyers have portrayed him as naive but well-intentioned.

U.S. soldier Bradley Manning's leaks of classified government files had a "chilling effect" on foreign relations, impeding U.S. diplomats' ability to gather information, a senior State Department official testified yesterday.

The unauthorized releases made foreign diplomats, business leaders and other information sources "reticent to provide their full and frank opinions and share them with us," Undersecretary of State for Management Patrick Kennedy said.

"Every single embassy" was affected, said Kennedy, who warned about long-term consequences of Manning's 2010 leaks to the anti-secrecy website WikiLeaks.

The releases will have "a chilling effect that will go on for some time" by cutting off information that political leaders need to make foreign policy decisions, he noted.

Kennedy testified at the sentencing hearing for Manning, who was convicted last week on criminal charges that included espionage. The hearing is to help the court-martial determine how long the private first class should be in prison.

Kennedy was part of a panel that assessed the damage Manning caused to U.S. foreign relations.

At one point, then-Secretary of State Hillary Clinton spoke out publicly in defense of her colleagues who sent the messages, which are known as diplomatic cables. REUTERS

Amazon founder Jeff Bezos to buy Washington Post

"I, along with Katharine Weymouth and our board of directors, decided to sell only after years of familiar newspaper-industry challenges made us wonder if there might be another owner who would be better for the Post," Graham said. "Jeff Bezos' proven

Japan nuclear body says radioactive water at Fukushima an 'emergency'

Countermeasures.

Action planned by Tokyo Electric Power is only a temporary fix, official says.

Highly radioactive water seeping into the ocean from Japan's crippled Fukushima nuclear plant is creating an "emergency" that the operator is struggling to contain, an official from the country's nuclear watchdog said on Monday.

This contaminated groundwater has breached an underground barrier at the Tokyo Electric Power Co. plant, is rising toward the surface and is exceeding legal limits of radioactive discharge, Shinji Kinjo, head of a Nuclear Regulatory Authority task force, told Reuters.

Tepco's "sense of crisis is weak," Kinjo said. "This is why you can't just leave it up to Tepco alone" to grapple with the ongoing disaster. "Right now, we have an emergency."

Tepco has been widely castigated for its failure to prepare for the massive 2011 tsunami and earthquake that devastated its Fukushima plant and lambasted for its inept response to the reactor melt-downs. It has also been accused of covering up shortcomings.

It was not immediately clear how much of a threat the contaminated groundwater could pose. In the early weeks of the disaster, the Japanese government allowed Tepco to dump tens of thousands of tons of contaminated water into the Pacific in an emergency move.

The toxic water release was however heavily criticized by neighboring countries as well as local fishermen and the utility has since promised it would not dump irradiated water without the consent of local townships.

Photo project: Are you really my friend?

Friendly world. Tanja Hollander travels the world to meet all of her Facebook friends.

U.S.-based photographer Tanja Hollander has amassed nearly 700 Facebook friends, but many of them she has never met in person. And so, she went on a huge journey in the hope of turning her online relationships into something more real. Metro interviewed the 41-year-old Maine native to find out more about her photo project titled "Are You Really My Friend?"

What is it like to travel and visit more than 700 friends?

It's been really interesting in every way. I'm about halfway through, so there's still 300 more to go. I'm still surprised about how many homes I've been to and how generous people are, especially the people that don't have a lot. They're willing to share what they do have, whether it's food, wine or introducing me to their friends and family, or just making some extra space at home for me to sleep.

Do you tell them you are going to visit, or surprise them on arrival?

Yes, I email everybody first.

So, how did you come up with the idea of visit all your Facebook friends?

On New Year's Eve in 2010, I was writing a letter to a friend in Afghanistan and at the same time instant-messaging with a friend who is working in Jakarta. I started thinking about those two friendships and the different way of communicating because they were in opposite places in the world. They're from different parts of my life. Both friendships and ways of communicating are important to me. So, I started to think about how we talk with so much technology and how much of our lives is so "photographable."

We know your friends let you stay at their homes, but how much money have you spent so far?

A lot! I don't know. That's a good question. It's been a lot. I started this project with a low budget. I could make another project on how to travel with not a lot of money.

Where did you start and which cities have you visited so far?

I started traveling in April 2011 and I've been to 100 U.S. cities and towns across 43 states. [There are] nine overseas destinations left.

'Wayney Wonder' is duck fetus eating champ, again

Wash it down. We hear it goes great with a cold beer.

If you're hankering for something strange, try balut. The Filipino delicacy is a boiled duck fetus, still swimming in its embryonic fluid. This weekend in New York, the restaurants Maharlika and Jeepney held the second annual balut eating contest at the Hester Street Fair. Last year's champion, Wayne "Wayney Wonder" Algenio reclaimed the top honors.

The first time around, he ate 18 balut in five minutes, which included shelling the eggs. This year, he bested himself and ate 27 balut. We spoke to the winner, juices still dripping down his shirt and a big smile on his face.

How did you hear about this contest?

I competed in last year's contest, and they contacted me to compete again this year.

Did you like balut before you entered this?

Well, last year was the first time I ate balut. It's good, but it's not something I'll eat outside of a contest. ... This is the second time I've eaten it.

What does it taste like?

Balut takes like a soupy boiled egg with broth. It's good.

Does the fact that it's a duck fetus gross you out?

It does a little. [Laughs]

Do you have a technique on how to finish 27 in five minutes?

I do have a technique that I figured out last year, but I can't let that secret out.

Wayne "Wayney Wonder" Algenio is a champion. / METRO WORLD NEWS

Did you train before this?

No. I mean I train for food contests. I didn't specifically train for balut. I've done hot dogs, hamburgers, pizza, tacos and that's about it. I've won a few. I won the San Gennaro Pizza Festival. I won a hamburger recently. Sixteen hamburgers in five minutes. I win a few, but I don't win them all.

Was this one special for you because you're Filipino?

This one was very special for me because it was the first time I was defending a championship.

First taste of test-tube burger, 'close to meat'

The world's first laboratory-grown beef burger was flipped out of a petri dish and into a frying pan yesterday, with food tasters declaring it tasted "close to meat."

Grown in-vitro from cattle stem cells at a cost of $332,000, the burger was cooked and eaten in front of television cameras to gain the greatest media coverage for the culmination of a five-year science experiment.

Resembling a standard circular-shaped red meat patty, it was created by knitting together 20,000 strands of laboratory-grown protein, combined with other ingredients normally used in burgers, such as salt, bread crumbs and egg powder. REUTERS

Leathers does self-love porn

Sydney Leathers, the e-mistress of former congressman and New York mayoral hopeful Anthony Weiner, is releasing a masturbation porn video (because of course she is).

Leathers filmed the porno at Vivid in Los Angeles in the last few days, according to TMZ. The site reports that in the video, Leathers "strikes a bunch of stereotypical porn poses and away she goes ... strumming the old banjo."

And now the song "I've Been Working on the Railroad" is completely ruined for me for life.

Lohan takes a jab at Kristen Stewart

LINDSAY LOHAN
GETTY IMAGES

Welp, it took 10 years, but I finally love Lindsay Lohan.

The actress made her first appearance as a guest host for "Chelsea Lately" and decided to kick things off by mocking "Twilight" star Kristen Stewart. "I'm just excited that Kristen Stewart, you know, finally showed some emotion," Lohan offered while discussing a photo in which Stewart is seen yelling at a photographer. "Of course she hates photographers. They got a picture of her kissing a married man in a Mini Cooper."

It looks like she's off the drugs, but hard on the sarcasm. Let's keep it up, LiLo.

Cowell's 'harem' warned him

Apparently Simon Cowell got plenty of warning from his "harem" of ex-girlfriends to watch out for Lauren Silverman, the married woman now said to be pregnant with his child, as they "were concerned about her motives and intentions," according to Radar Online. "Simon was warned — on multiple occasions — that he needed to be careful," says a source, explaining that Cowell has remained quite close to many of his exes.

Swift will continue her ways

Fair warning to potential Taylor Swift suitors: She is looking to continue combining business and pleasure, according to Rolling Stone magazine. "I am getting to a point where the only love worth being in is the love worth singing about," Swift says. "When you experience something that's worth writing a song about, chances are it's the same kind of intense feeling that someone else has felt and it has led them to be sitting on a bedroom floor crying or walking through a crowded room feeling alone."

Meet Kathryn Hahn, the class clown

Future star. The actress talks about the move from drama to comedy.

On prepping for her character: "For some reason I decided she had to have cumbersome, maternal boobs. So I put on fake big boobs. I grew up in Ohio. I have a very soft spot for this type of woman — open, food always out, always up for a family weekend away at a campground. I just know this woman and love her so much."

On working with a lot of the same people over and over again (Nick Offerman and Will Ferrell, each twice; Jennifer Aniston, thrice; Paul Rudd, four times): "You want to work with people you dig, but also people you not only respect but would feel safe with. You have to feel comfortable with grabbing each other's boobs, for example [as she does to Aniston in "Millers"]."

On being a dramatic actress who never thought of herself as a comic actress: "I was always the class clown. I've never been cast as the ingenue. It was always as the grandma. I should have known that somewhere in there, comedy was in my cards. I've been able to go back and forth, which is my favorite thing about my job. I would never deem myself an improv comedian or a stand-up. I'm still waiting for them to go, 'What are you doing here?'"

On entering the world of comedy: "They all make it incredibly easy. More than anything they're the most decent human beings. They're not on all the time. It's not exhausting. When I first met Will Ferrell, I was so nervous, even more so than if I had been meeting the president. I didn't think I could open my mouth because I would never say anything funny ever again. But they just allow freedom in that environment. You can't make a wrong move. There are no mistakes."

Moe Szyslak directs porn

Interview. In "Lovelace," Hank Azaria plays the man who made "Deep Throat."

Hank Azaria is more often heard than seen, given that he's about to start his 25th season as the voice of Moe, Apu, Chief Wiggum, Comic Book Guy, et al., on "The Simpsons." But he has a long history in front of the camera as well.

He currently can be seen, under impressive makeup, as Gargamel in "The Smurfs 2." The flip side of his talents can be seen in "Lovelace," a biopic about the making of the legendary box office juggernaut "Deep Throat," in which he plays the adult film's director, Jerry Damiano. You were very young

Risky business

What attracted you to the project?

People were asking me if I had second thoughts doing it. I could imagine why Amanda [Seyfried, who plays star

Linda Lovelace] might have second thoughts, with all the nudity. But I can't imagine why anyone else would. Post-"Boogie Nights," why would anybody hesitate? You'd think I'd been asked to do a porno.

when "Deep Throat" came out. How aware of it were you then?

You heard about it. It was a big deal. I remember hearing "Deep Throat" and confusing it with Watergate. I knew it was sexual, but I obviously never saw the film, at least back then.

How did you prepare for the role?

There was a lot of interview footage of this guy. He's much like I portray him — he was very sweet and open and enthusiastic and thinking he was making art. He loved making movies, and loved pornography. It wasn't "Oh, sh—, I wanted to be a filmmaker and I got stuck here!" This guy really loved making adult movies and wanted them to be as great as they could be, almost in a childlike way.

Was it easy to get into that '70s vibe?

The wardrobe and the hair really did that for us. It's hard not to feel like you're in the '70s when you're dressed head-to-toe in polyester. I found myself very grateful we're no longer in the polyester era, even though I wore it as a kid. Boy, is that stuff uncomfortable and ridiculous. It's like wearing plastic. It doesn't breathe.

How do you handle that tonal switch as an actor?

You just try to play things honestly. I was depicting Jerry very much as he was, how he sounded. He had his sense of humor and what he was earnest about. They did a smart thing in editing: They made it two very clear sections — here's the happy version of what happened, and here's the more realistic not so f—ing happy version of what happened. By doing that they avoided anybody saying this film has tonal problems. It's true that, like life, both extremes existed at the same time. But they were smart in the way they cut it to give you one version of the story, then another.

Where 'Romeo and Juliet' ended

What's in a name?
"Still Star-Crossed" is a sequel of sorts of Shakespeare's classic play.

Author Melinda Taub refers to her young adult book, "Still Star-Crossed," as a mash-up of "adventure and romance" that chronicles the story of the characters who survive "Romeo and Juliet" as they fight to stop the deadly feud from reigniting. As you can tell, this isn't the Shakespeare you remember from high school. "Still Star-Crossed" contains "sword fights, masked assassins, betrayal, a ball, cross-dressing, iambic pentameter, kissing and horses," as Taub puts it. She had us at cross-dressing.

What is it about the story of "Romeo and Juliet" that made you think to create a sequel of sorts?

I really love the world of "Romeo and Juliet." It's essentially a romantic comedy for the first half — it's full of dancing and kisses and sex jokes — before a series of coincidences and bad choices turn it toward tragedy. It gives you the feeling that the cycle will continue when the play's done, just like it does in real life. Characters like Mercutio and the nurse feel like they've wandered in from other, equally interesting plays. There are more stories to be told about Verona.

How much research did you do to write "Still Star-Crossed"?

I didn't do as much research as you might think. I tried mostly to use words in the dialogue that Shakespeare would use, so I kept a copy of his complete works handy and searched through it every 30 seconds or so. However, I wanted to

Taub says she "worried endlessly" about the language in "Still Star-Crossed." / PROVIDED really capture the feel of Shakespeare's style or at least honor it, and Shakespeare flew by the seat of his pants a lot of the time. If he needed a word that didn't exist, he made it up. He played pretty fast and loose with history and geography, too. So I thought it was only right that I did the same.

What were some of the biggest liberties you took in writing this?

I took small liberties all over the place. Shakespeare is a bold storyteller who liked to include a little of everything awesome, so I tried to do the same. I'd rather include a word he wouldn't have used, but would have liked, than fret too much about historical accuracy.

On language

Were you ever worried that writing it in Shakespearean English might throw readers off?

"I worried endlessly about the language. For the first few drafts of the book, the dialogue varied wildly — sometimes incomprehensibly Elizabethan, sometimes sounding straight out of 'Gossip Girl.'" Taub says that over time she found a happy medium. "I think anyone, even a total Shakespeare novice, could pick the book up and follow it with no trouble — and hopefully, they'll find the story exciting enough that they'll want to."

Park news

Safari expansion nets Six Flags' new title

Move over Disney. Six Flags Great Adventure is now the world's largest park thanks to its newest expansion ride, Safari Off Road Adventure. The Jackson, N.J., theme park reimaged its 38-year-old Wild Safari park during the off-season, outfitting the 350-acre, 1,200-animal preserve with 18 open-air safari vehicles customized from surplus army trucks.

"It's a worthwhile, interesting attraction," says Paul Ruben, industry expert and North American editor of Park World magazine.

By merging the Safari reserve with the existing Great Adventure property, the park is now 510 acres — surpassing Walt Disney World's Animal Kingdom (500 acres) as the world's largest theme park.

A thrilling summer of roller coaster fun

Amusement.

Summer may be winding down, but there's still plenty of time to get your heart racing with these rides.

Pete Trabucco has a pretty thrilling job — he's an amusement park expert. The author of "America's Top Roller Coasters and Amusement Parks" gave us the 411 on the best roller coasters for you to see this summer.

Hottest new coaster

Gatekeeper
Cedar Point, Sandusky, Ohio

Trabucco calls Cedar Point the "Mecca for all roller coaster enthusiasts." Gatekeeper is "one of the most anticipated rides that's coming out of that location," he says. "It's an absolutely amazing wing coaster in which you are actually suspended on the other side of this entire track," he says. "You are just flying with nothing but just air."

Cedar Point has 16 coasters, including Gatekeeper. It is also the only amusement park to have four coasters taller than 200 feet, including Top Thrill Dragster, the second tallest roller coaster in the world.

Tallest thriller

Kingda Ka
Six Flags Great Adventure, Jackson, N.J.
www.sixflags.com/greatadventure

Luckily for us New Yorkers, we don't have to go very far to enjoy the world's tallest and second fastest roller coaster. Going from 0-128 mph in about four seconds, this steel accelerator reaches 456 feet before it drops 418 feet at a 90-degree angle.

Best wooden coaster

El Toro
Six Flags Great Adventure, Jackson, N.J.

Becoming the first wooden coaster to use a cable lift instead of a chain lift, allowing for a much faster and steeper ride, El Toro has one of the steepest wooden-coaster drops and was voted the 2013 No. 1 Wooden Coaster by Amusement Today.

Best Florida coaster

Dragon Challenge
Harry Potter World, Universal Park, Orlando, Fla.
www.universalorlando.com/harrypotter/

"The Dragon Challenge is basically two coasters that actually come tip to tip," says Trabucco. "When you're on the ride you actually almost touch toes as you loop the loop simultaneously."

Perfect the art of bedtime stories

Make sure the story you're telling includes some sort of struggle.
BLEND IMAGES

Storytelling. Here's how to improve your nightly ritual.

Don't tell lies like the boy who cried wolf — and don't worry about being last, because the tortoise and the hare proved that slow and steady wins the race.

We all remember these lessons from childhood tales, but how do we make our own stories memorable to children?

That is where Ty Bennett's new book, "The Power of Storytelling: The Art of Influential Communication" comes in.

Stories can be used in various ways as an influential form of communication, whether they are serving as a lesson or an anecdote to a future employer.

Get the storytelling strategy down pat in order to make your words memorable.

Craft a conflict and solution

While telling a bedtime story to his 2-year-old, Bennett adopted the "struggle to solution" technique after the response of his child saying, "That's not a story, there's no bad guy."

"There's something about conflict and challenge that engages us emotionally," Bennett says. "The struggle is the hook of the story."

So once you have successfully hooked your listener, you have acquired the power to provide them with a solution that can serve as a story worth remembering.

"If you connect with the problem," Bennett says, "and the person who is hearing the story resonates that, then they're going to want to adopt that [solution] into their life."

Lessons serve kids and adults

Maybe you aren't looking to tell stories to kids, but that doesn't make this skill any less useful. According to Bennett, storytelling is the most influential form of communication.

"Regardless of what you do for a living," says Bennett, "you're going to need to communicate with people, and the more influential you become, the better that communication becomes, the more influence and impact you can have on people's lives."

So maybe in your next job interview, you will tell a remarkably memorable story that will make you relatable and stand out, or maybe you will teach your kids to just say no to the negativity around them through an experience you went through.

Make sure you use your new skills to make the story a relatable, memorable and powerful experience.

JULIE KAYZERMAN
letters@metro.us

Tip

Make it into a conversation

"With kids, you need to engage them, so you need to ask a lot of questions and make it conversational," Bennett says. "It really helps them to get into the story ... so they really feel and understand [it]."

US should cast a wider net of castigation

Re: 'Senator: Putin acting like "schoolyard bully"' (Metro, Aug. 5)

If we're going to stand up to bullies like Putin, where is the indignation against its high-profile authoritarian neighbor China? Here's a country whose rulers censor the Internet, jail a journalist for predicting Tiananmen Square-anniversary unrest, mandate abortions beyond one child per family and persecute practitioners of the Buddhist-based spiritual discipline Falun Gong. Let's start applying the same standards to bullies worldwide.

Think of his good deeds

Re: 'Don't let one bad spot spoil the whole fruit' (Metro, Aug. 5) I'm glad that letter writer Barbara Mikulski recognizes that Eliot Spitzer should be forgiven. However, I wish that she would be equally tolerant toward Anthony Weiner. When he was in Congress, he was very good to the senior citizens in his district. And, when the New York Press published an article that joked about Pope John Paul II's death, Mr. Weiner was the first politician to condemn it.

Yesterday's answer

Rodriguez suspended 211 games, files appeal

MLB. The slugger took a defiant tone in addressing the ban prior to last night's game.

For as outsized a media production as Alex Rodriguez's suspension became, MLB delivered the official news in understated fashion with a simple press release yesterday afternoon.

Rodriguez has been suspended through the end of the 2014 season.

"Rodriguez's discipline under the Joint Drug Prevention and Treatment Program is based on his use and possession of numerous forms of prohibited performance-enhancing substances, including testosterone and human growth hormone, over the course of multiple years," MLB wrote in its statement announcing the suspension. "Rodriguez's discipline under the basic agreement is for attempting to cover up his violations of the program by engaging in a course of conduct intended to obstruct and frustrate the Office of the Commissioner's investigation. The suspension, which will become effective on Thursday [Aug. 8], will cover 211 championship season games and any 2013 post-season games in which Rodriguez otherwise would have been eligible to play."

He filed an appeal and was in the lineup, batting cleanup, last night against the White Sox.

But before he could take his place on the infield, he addressed an overflow crowd of journalists prior to the opening pitch last night.

"The last seven months have been a nightmare, probably the worst time of my life," Rodriguez said. "I am thrilled and humbled to have the opportunity to put on this uniform again and to play Major League Baseball again."

He would not answer when asked directly whether he had used performance-enhancing drugs, saying the press conference was "not the forum" for that discussion.

"I'm fighting for my life," Rodriguez said. "I have to defend myself. If I don't defend myself, no one else will."

Valdespin takes Biogenesis ban

MLB. Two Mets players were among the little-discussed players to accept suspensions from MLB.

Valdespin had a combative tenure with the Mets, but he was also suspended in Triple-A last week after a brawl. / GETTY IMAGES

Tucked away in the list of 12 players suspended for 50 games by MLB yesterday were two Mets: Jordany Valdespin and Cesar Puello.

Both are currently in the minors and will begin serving the suspensions immediately.

Valdespin is familiar to Mets fans, having spent 66 often-tumultuous games in the major leagues. He was sent down last month and reportedly had an outburst in the clubhouse when told so by manager Terry Collins.

Valdespin was batting .188 at the time. In 16 games with Triple-A Las Vegas, he was hitting .466 with three homers.

Puello is more of an unknown, but the 22-year-old outfielder is a prospect for the Mets. He was batting .328 with 16 home runs for Double-A Binghamton.

Hootons sever ties to A-Rod

MLB. A foundation fighting for youth steroid awareness is frustrated over a lack of reaction.

In the wake of an unnerving tragedy, Don Hooton stood before a congressional committee to describe the death of his son Taylor, an athlete pressured to find an edge at all costs.

Eight years later, he says the disappointment of baseball's latest scandal is a black cloud hovering over the bigger picture: teens experimenting with steroids.

Yesterday, MLB suspended Alex Rodriguez for a record 211 games, just two weeks after former MVP Ryan Braun accepted a season-ending suspension. Braun previ-

Don Hooton, right, at the 2005 hearing, and the Taylor Hooton Foundation pushed Congress last week for education in schools. / GETTY IMAGES

Quoted

"Want to guess how much the federal government has done since those hearings? They've done absolutely nothing. Not even a brochure."

Hooton, on action by Congress since the 2005 hearings

ously said he'd "bet his life that this substance never entered my body at any point."

At the March 2005 hearing on Capitol Hill — one in which MLB players fervently denied their ties to performance-enhancing drugs in a made-for-TV spectacle — Hooton spoke on behalf of the growing steroid problem in young adults.

"We in this country get so focused on the shiny objects, in this case it's the professional athletes," Hooton said last week. "The whole challenge is getting the American public to recognize how many kids are doing this."

In the wake of MLB's decision to suspend Rodriguez, the Taylor Hooton Foundation released a statement yesterday terminating its relationship with the slugger, who had worked with them since he admitted to steroid use in 2009.

"It is simply not acceptable for the foundation to be delivering positive education messages to kids in partnership with an athlete who has continued to use performance enhancing drugs in violation of the rules of Major League Baseball and in direct opposition to the lessons that we teach children," said Neil Romano, the board's chairman.
